

Did you know?

American Sign Language is a full and complete language with its own grammar structure.

For persons whose native language is ASL, English is a second language, spoken or written.

This means that providing written material is not as effective as providing ASL interpretation as an accommodation.

Learn more ways to make parishes everyone's home at ncpd.org